Asado wins accolades at BBC Good Food ME Awards

Dubai, UAE; March 2, 2011: Asado, the lively Argentinean Grill at The Palace – The Old Town, was recently acknowledged as the Best Latin American Restaurant at the BBC Good Food ME Awards.

Norberto Palacios received the Award from Lauren Hills Editor of BBC Good Food ME at the ceremony.

The winners were adjudged through a transparent nomination and popular voting process with key parameters being evaluated including quality and culinary excellence. A panel of judges also appraised the short-listed restaurants chosen through public voting.

Jason Harding, General Manager of The Palace – The Old Town, said: “This Award highlights the world-class quality standards Asado follows and the wide public acceptance for our culinary delights. In a short span, Asado has established its credentials as one of the city’s best Latin American restaurants and the Award will further encourage our team to offer a unique lifestyle experience for our visitors.”

Asado serves premium meat cuts prepared Asado Criollo-style on an open Parrilla grill in the centre of the restaurant. It features an à la carte menu as well as an extensive beverage menu with the largest collection of Argentinean beverages in addition to providing live entertainment.

The restaurant features a terrace for guests to enjoy their meal al fresco during cooler months and stunning views of The Dubai Fountain.

The Palace - The Old Town is owned and operated by Emaar Hospitality Group’s 5 star premium hotel brand, The Address Hotels + Resorts. The landmark hotel features 242 beautifully-appointed deluxe rooms including 81 suites, all with balconies overlooking Burj Lake or The Old Town Island.
